

Lisa JoAnn Pacheco & Jeffrey Steven Geysler

As ardent Diamondback fans, Lisa Pacheco and Jeff Geysler met after the seventh game of the 2001 World Series. They continued to date and shortly realized how much they enjoyed each other's company, and as their relationship progressed they wanted to make it permanent. However, there was one huge obstacle in the path – a difference in religions. Lisa was Catholic and Jeff is Jewish and a mixed marriage was out of the question.

Lisa made the decision to convert. For two and a half years she traveled to Los Angeles every Sunday (for the day) to complete her studies for conversion to Orthodox Judaism. With that accomplished she and Jeff were ready to move forward with their life together.

After four years, Lisa and Jeff became husband and wife in an Orthodox ceremony under a custom made chuppah accompanied by Lisa's mother and father and Jeff's mother and brother. A long road traveled to a beautiful and meaningful end.

The wedding turned out to be even more beautiful than either Lisa or Jeff could have imagined with the help of Mindy Pallagi of Paperplay Productions who paid scrupulous attention to every detail from the flowers and tiny lights hanging in the trees to the candles providing romantic, ambient light for the reception.
